Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1, 2 and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hendren et al (PG Pub# US2003/0136177). As to claim 1, Hendren et al disclose an emission sampling apparatus including a dilution tunnel 20 with inlet 17 with a sampling system 70,72,74, exhaust 11 of engine 12, flow control valve 28, second mass flow controller 36, filter 34 with a dilution air control arrangement 42/50 having a constant mass stream via fixed flow rate pump 29 and a variable flow stream "connected with" the constant stream via variably controlled solenoid valve 28, see figs 1-2. Further, it is noted that a mass flow controller, per se is not designated by Hendren et al. However, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have designated the computer controlled solenoid valve 28 as a mass flow controller as it performs the function of controlling the flowrate. As to claim 2, usage of a critical flow venturi is old and well-known for flowrate control. Therefore, the inclusion of a venturi in addition to valve 28 is considered to have been a matter of design choice obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention for the additional control of the flowrate. As to claim 9, note LFE 40 at the air intake of engine 12.

Art Unit: 2856

3. Claims 10-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hendren et al in view of Kono- U.S. Patent # 4,067,300. As to claim 10, Hendren et al do not elaborate on the type of laminar flow measurement used in the LFE 40.

However, in a related prior art device, Kono discloses using the pressure differential at the intake port of the engine which is generated in a laminar flow meter, see col. 4, lines 46 et seq. Therefore, usage of a pressure differential measurement with laminar flow element is considered to have been a matter design choice obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention in view of the teaching by Kono as a known expediency for measuring the air intake flowrate . As to claims 11-13, usage of a selectable gain circuit to provide the "computer control" provided to the LFE is considered to have been a matter of design choice obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention. Also the computer would have obviously 1 or more channel inputs or course settings.

4. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-2 and 9-13 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

5. Claims 3-8 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

6. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP

§ 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
